families with working parents. A home-based childcare project for 12 children has been proposed to address this issue. This project aims to provide quality care and early childhood education in a home setting, which can be more comfortable and familiar for young children.

By offering childcare in a home-based setting, parents in Vienna will have access to a more convenient and intimate option for their children's care. The home environment can provide a nurturing and personalized experience for each child, allowing for individual attention and care.

Additionally, by limiting the number of children to 12, the project ensures that each child receives adequate attention and support from the caregiver. This smaller ratio allows for more one-on-one interactions and personalized care, promoting the overall development and well-being of the children.
